

THE MCCOMBS SCHOOL AT UT AUSTIN

INSIDER TIPS

ABOUT MCCOMBS SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Known as the “Harvard of Texas,” UT Austin is a world-class public university with a 40-acre campus nestled in the 11th largest city in the United States. With strengths in technology and entrepreneurship, the McCombs School of Business leverages its Austin location, a city increasingly known for being a technology centre with increasing number of ex-Silicon Valley transplants. Austin is also routinely ranked among the best cities in the US for business, education, and the arts.

The full-time MBA class is made up of less than 250 students, making it one of the smaller top-20 MBA programs. Of the 22 concentrations offered, 14 are STEM certified. Entrepreneurship, Management Consulting, Clean Tech, Innovation Leadership, and Supply Chain & Operations Management rank in the top five chosen by MBA students.

Students can choose from a dozen degree options offered at UT Austin, including Communications, Global Policy, and Public Affairs, among others. The school boasts nearly 50 student-led organizations, spanning a range of professional, social, and affinity groups.

Considered a “public Ivy,” McCombs students can leverage a network of 500,000+ UT Austin alumni.

ENTREPRENEURSHIP IS A STRENGTH

With a mantra of “Human Centered. Future Focused,” McCombs is a great place for those targeting entrepreneurship. The Herb Kelleher Center for Entrepreneurship promotes cross-campus collaboration on research and experiential learning activities supporting startup creation. Through the Texas Venture Lab accelerator, companies have raised $491 million in funding for 178 startups – McCombs students greatly benefit from the thought leadership that comes to campus to engage with students involved with the lab. Finally, the new Social Innovation Initiative inspires and educates students to create economic value while also creating positive social and environmental impact.

MCCOMBS TAKES PRIDE IN BEING PART OF A LARGER A PUBLIC INSTITUTION

It’s important to demonstrate enthusiasm and excitement that McCombs is part of the University of Texas, Austin. Considered a “public Ivy,” McCombs students can leverage a network of 500,000+ University of Texas at Austin alumni (the list of alumni includes notable graduates ranging from Michael Dell, Laura Bush, and Matthew McConaughey) and 100,000+ McCombs alumni who are eager to network with their fellow “Longhorns*.”

COMMITTED TO A DIVERSITY OF PERSPECTIVES

A hallmark of the MBA program at McCombs is a commitment to a diversity of perspectives. Noting this: "Collaboration drives everything we do," McCombs champions diversity in the classroom and strives to develop student leaders whose mindsets will transcend geographic and cultural boundaries. The number of clubs for specific affinity groups is impressive - be sure to think about one or two you would plan to join if accepted; McCombs students are highly active participants in the 45+ MBA-specific organizations.

ROWLING HALL IS EXCEPTIONAL

Only two years old, the 497,500-square-foot graduate business facility, Robert B. Rowling Hall, is the envy of most b-school programs. From the school's website: "Rowling Hall is designed to convene and inspire bright minds and enterprising leaders from around the university and beyond. Every corner of the building, from the expansive entry hall to the Moontower Café, has been created to promote conversation, camaraderie and idea-sharing among students, faculty members, staff members, alumni, recruiters, executives, and other business school visitors and guests." Students joke that they never want to leave school because the new building offers everything they need, including ample study spaces, beautiful outdoor terraces, an MBA gym/locker room, and a comfy student lounge.

KEEP AUSTIN WEIRD

"Keep Austin Weird" was a slogan initially adopted to promote small businesses in Austin, but the larger implication is that Austin, and the University of Texas, attracts vanguard cultural events, such as Austin City Limits Music Festival and South by Southwest. McCombs students have pride in living in the "Live Music Capital of the World" and attend numerous on and off-campus performances (some at a discount). There is also a vibrant "foodie" scene in Austin that the students rave about; those in the MBA Brewing Association and Graduate Business Wine Club enjoy connecting with local businesses to support them and to learn more about the food/beverage industry.

HOOK 'EM HORNS

A University of Texas cheerleader introduced the "Hook 'em Horns" hand sign at a pep rally in 1955 and it is now an internationally recognized greeting for Longhorns*. It's even used in written correspondence as: Type a forward slash "/" . When put together, the "\m/" emoticon resembles the "hook 'em horns" hand gesture. Don't be surprised if your emails from those at McCombs have the Hook 'em wording, usually as the closing line in a message to you.

*A Longhorn is a type of steer (cattle) and is the UT Austin mascot, lovingly named "Bevo".
